The Great Pyramid

Over two thousand years ago, a Greek writer named Antipater made a list of what he called the Seven Wonders of the World. Only one of those ancient sights remains today. It is the Great Pyramid, in Egypt.

The Great Pyramid is located just outside Cairo. It was built by one of the earliest kings of Egypt, Cheops. Cheops intended this pyramid to be a tomb, or burial place, for himself. It covers an area bigger than one hundred football fields and stands 450 feet high. It is the largest of the more than sixty pyramids in Egypt. The Great Pyramid is made of two and a half million blocks of stone; some of them weigh as much as fifteen tons. The pyramid's surface was once covered in shining white limestone and was perfectly smooth. Over the centuries, most of this outside layer has been stripped away; very little of it is left.

It may have taken as long as twenty years to build the Great Pyramid. The stone for the great blocks came from nearby. The white limestone for the outside came from quarries near the Nile River. The blocks were floated across on rafts. They were then dragged up a ramp of earth. The ramp was built up in stages as the work progressed. Skilled stonecutters worked all year on the pyramid. Other work was done by farmers, who worked for a portion of each year. The farmers probably worked from July to October, when the Nile overflowed its banks and flooded the fields. Workers believed that their king, Cheops, was a god, a descendant of the sun god Ra. They felt he deserved this magnificent tomb.

The interior of the Great Pyramid contains many rooms. The rooms are connected by passages leading to the outside. King Cheops was laid to rest in one of the most spacious rooms. The Egyptians believed in a life after death. They left food and drink with the king's body as well as many precious objects he had used in daily life. The Egyptians believed he would need these in the next world.

The chamber in which the dead king lay was closed off with huge granite slabs. The Egyptians wanted to be sure that people could not gain entry to the room. In spite of this, however, intruders later found a way in. They stole the gold objects and the jewels that were inside. They even made off with the body! The Great Pyramid failed to keep Cheops's body safe, but it has kept his name alive over 4,500 years after his death.

► Answer each of the following questions in the form of a sentence. If a question does not contain a vocabulary word from the lesson's word list, use one in your answer. Use each word only once.

1. What makes the Great Pyramid unusual among the places on Antipater's list?

2. How could one go from room to room within the Great Pyramid?

3. Why would the interior of the Great Pyramid be very dark?

4. How did the Egyptians raise the stones onto the pyramid?

5. Why did the white limestone have to come by water?

6. Why did some people work on the pyramid for only a portion of the year?

9. What are some of the precious objects that might have been left with the dead king?

10. Why did the Egyptians place granite slabs outside the king's tomb?

11. What happened to the gold and the jewels that were inside the tomb?

12. When (to the nearest hundred years) was the Great Pyramid built?

13. Why did the Egyptians think Cheops deserved such a magnificent tomb?

14. How does the Great Pyramid differ from when it was first built?

15. What is the location of Cairo?

FUN & FASCINATING FACTS

- In Lesson 7 you learned that the Greek word for "eight" is okto. In Latin, it became octo. (An octopus has eight arms. October was the eighth month in the Roman calendar; we changed it and made it the tenth month.)

- A large number of English words are formed from Greek or Latin numbers. Among them is our word century, a period of one hundred years. It comes from the Latin for one hundred, which is centum. Other words sharing this root include cent (there are one hundred cents in a dollar), centipede (this creature was once thought to have one hundred legs, but it actually has about seventy), and centimeter (there are one hundred centimeters in a meter).

In 1976 the United States celebrated its bicentennial. If you knew nothing of the history of the United States, but knew that the Latin for "two" is bi, could you figure out how old the United States was in 1976?

- How can the word quarry have two such separate and unrelated meanings? For the answer to this question, we must look into the word's history. In fact, it is not one word but two quite different ones that by chance have the same spelling.

The word for an animal being hunted comes from the old French cuiree, the name for body parts fed to animals after a successful hunt. The word passed into English as querre, which in modern English became quarry.

The word for a deep pit where stone is cut out of the ground comes from the Latin quadrum, which means "squared at the corners." It was applied to stones used for building, which were usually squared at the corners. As the word changed over the years to quarry, it came to mean the place from which the stone was obtained.
